FOR RELEASE WEDNESDAY, APRIL 9Montana State University Weekly News Roundup

INDIAN INSTITUTE OPENS AT MSU

The fifth annual Institute of Indian Affairs will open at Montana State University, Missoula, on Wednesday (April 9) and continue through Friday.

The theme of this year's institute is "The Future of Indian Youth". The program will include talks, panel discussions, social events, and Indian ceremonies, according to Walter McDonald of St. Ignatius, chairman of the State Intertribal Policy Board.

The board, made up of representatives of the seven Montana tribes and the landless Indians, will sponsor the institute with the cooperation of the University.

SCIENCE FAIR AT MSU THIS WEEKEND

Over 300 students from Montana high schools and junior high schools are expected to exhibit scientific projects at the Montana Science Fair, which will be conducted at Montana State University, Missoula, Friday and Saturday (April 11 and 12), according to Dr. R. A. Diettert, chairman of the MSU Botany Dept. and director of the fair.

The boy and the girl whose exhibits are judged best will each win an expense-paid trip to compete in the National Science Fair in Flint, Mich., in May. Many other prizes will also be awarded.
